Glamorous GLADIOLUS

During the past two years we have featured Rainbow Assortments of gladiolus in our catalog. Hundreds of satisfied customers have bought these collections, and many have written asking us to carry named varieties in addition to the collection offers. In response to this demand we are offering thirty gladiolus varieties this year. Included in these thirty are many of the standard florist varieties, as well as a number of the newer sorts. Try at least a few dozen of these beautiful flowers in your garden this season. Naturally the bulbs offered are of the same high quality as our dahlias and are guaranteed to please you one hundred per cent or your money will be cheerfully refunded. GROW A GARDEN OF GLAMOROUS GLADS.

All gladiolus varieties are offered in two sizes, Large and Medium. Large bulbs measure $1\frac{1}{4}$ " or more across, and Medium bulbs measure $\frac{3}{4}$ " to $1\frac{1}{4}$ " across. ALL THESE SIZES WILL BLOOM THIS YEAR. Large bulbs will bloom somewhat sooner than Medium sized bulbs, and will occasionally have two or three spikes per bulb rather than one. Large bulbs will also sometimes make slightly taller and fuller spikes.

How to Grow Dahlias ...

PLANTING AND CULTURE

Dahlias will grow in any garden soil, and superior flowers can be produced with a little extra care. The ground should be in a moist growing condition at all times, especially during the blooming season. After all danger of frost is past, plant the tubers in an open sunny location in holes four to six inches deep and two to three feet apart, either in rows or in mass effects. If stakes are used for name tags and support later on, they should be set at planting time. Cover the tuber with about two inches of soil and fill in as the sprout grows. To avoid too tall a bush pinch out the top of the plant just under the first set of leaves when five or six side branches have appeared. Water every week, soaking the ground thoroughly.

FERTILIZER

Bone meal may be mixed with the soil in the hole at planting time—a small cupfull to each plant. Commercial fertilizers may be used—rather sparingly—about three weeks between applications during the flowering season, but be sure the dust does not get closer than four inches to the stalk. Immediate watering is advised. Cow or sheep manures are good, especially for the humus content, but not horse manure, as it will give too rank a growth.

INSECT CONTROL

Insects on dahlias can be easily controlled by using DDT for thrips, leaf-hopper and cucumber or twelve spot beetles. Any insecticide with a nicotine base can be used for aphids. Follow directions on the package. For red spider use parathion, either dust or spray.

CUT FLOWERS

Dahlias should be cut when the blooms are fully matured, because they do not open out in water. An immature flower will wilt and one too old will shatter. Pick them late at night or early in the morning, using a sharp knife to make a slanting cut. Put them in deep cold water and let them stand several hours before arranging. Scrape the stems slightly for about five to six inches at the base or dip the stems in very hot water for a minute or two. This will make the flowers last longer because it opens up the pores and allows them to absorb more water.

DIGGING AND STORING

Late in the fall, usually after a frost, cut the bushes off close to the ground. Dig the clumps carefully, making sure the roots are not broken away from the stalk or the necks are not twisted or broken. Trim off the stalk as close to the clump as possible. Store the clumps in crates or barrels in a place free from frost, but not so dry that tubers will shrivel. A good rule to follow for storing dahlias is to keep them as you would potatoes. Divide the clumps at planting time after the eyes or sprouts are easily seen. Never plant the whole clump. This will make a cluster of weaker bushes instead of one strong plant.

Waterlily Dahlias

Actually Decorative type dahlias, these varieties have been officially classed as Waterlily types because of their tendency to cup up and close at night. Unsurpassed as cut flowers they will add a "different" touch to that corner of your garden which needs something special. These three varieties are among the best produced to date and are guaranteed to delight you.

Gerry Hoeck. Rich pink in the center shading to pastel at the edges. Exceptionally delicate and fine for arrangements.

Golden Drop. Deep rich gold. The rather low bushes produce a host of blooms on very strong stems.

Helly Boudewijn. Satin white. Tall bush with extra long stiff stems.
